

ATTACHMENT I – Abstract

Barrier element for bounding a carriageway, comprising a guide element extending about a longitudinal axis, which guide element transversely to the longitudinal axis has on the underside a foot part, which on the first end of the guide element is provided with a base plate, which base plate is provided with parts of a tenon and mortise connecting system as the first connecting means for connecting the barrier element to a second barrier element, which is provided with parts of a tenon and mortise system as the second connecting means, which interact with the first connecting means, at the first end the barrier element being provided with fixing means for accommodating a fixing element for fixing the barrier element relative to the carriageway.